SPOTLIGHT

WEBLAW

Weblaw is an electronic subject directory of Internet resources for Australian legal researchers It is a co-operative project being developed by Australian law librarians to eliminate the duplication of time and effort required to create in-house subject directories Participating organizations take responsibility for a subject area or areas and provide annotated links to quality assessed resources in this area. Each organization maintains their own legal subject guide page and makes links to the relevant Weblaw site

Quality controls include the use of commonly agreed metadata based on international standards, and peer review. The sites are checked and updated each month.

The project has recently been awarded a Research Infrastructure Equipment and Facilities (REIF) grant for 2001. These funds will contribute to development of a database and search engine, and a Web Development Coordinator. The University of Queensland will be the 'home site' and administrator of the grant.
