

Contributors

Nicholas Aroney is Senior Lecturer and Fellow of the Centre for Public, International and Comparative Law at the University of Queensland. He has taught and published widely in Australian constitutional law, comparative constitutional law, legal theory and legal history. He is author of Freedom of Speech in the Constitution (Sydney: Centre for Independent Studies, 1998). He has been editor of the University of Queensland Law Journal and is on the editorial board of International Trade and Business Law Annual.

Keven Booker is a member of the Faculty of Law at the University of New South Wales. His principal teaching and research interests are federal constitutional law, colonial constitutional law and the High Court. He is the co-author of Federal Constitutional Law: An Introduction (2nd ed, Sydney: Butterworths, 1998).

Gerard Carney is a Professor of Law at Bond University and for 2006 was a Visiting Professor at the University of Western Australia. He has a particular research interest in State constitutional law and parliamentary privilege. His major publications are: The Constitutional Systems of the Australian States and Territories (Melbourne: Cambridge University Press, 2006) and Members of Parliament: law and ethics (Sydney: Prospect/Lexis Nexis Butterworths, 2000). He acts as an advisor to a range of federal and State parliamentary committees.

David Clune is the Manager of the Research Service in the New South Wales Parliamentary Library and an Adjunct Lecturer in Government at the University of Sydney. He was awarded the Federation Medal in 2001. He has written widely about NSW politics and history. He is the author with Gareth Griffith of Decision and Deliberation: the Parliament of NSW, 1856-2003 (Sydney: Federation Press, 2006), and the editor with Ken Turner of The Premiers of NSW, 1856-2005 (Sydney: Federation Press, 2006).

Peter Gerangelos is the Associate Dean (Undergraduate Studies) and Senior Lecturer in Law, University of Sydney, where he lectures in Federal Constitutional Law, Advanced Constitutional Law, and the Law of Evidence. Before joining the Faculty he was Principal Solicitor in the Office of the Australian Government Solicitor. He has published in the field of constitutional law and the separation of powers, including from a comparative perspective. He is the author of the chapter on State Constitutional Law in Winterton, Lee, Glass and Thomson, Australian Federal Constitutional Law: Commentary and Materials (2nd ed, Sydney: Lawbook Co, 2007).

CONTRIBUTORS

Jeffrey Goldsworthy is a Professor of Law at Monash University. He is best known for his book The Sovereignty of Parliament, History and Philosophy (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1999), his edited collection Interpreting Constitutions, a Comparative Study (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2006), and many articles and book chapters on constitutional law, theory and history.

Gareth Griffith is the Senior Research Officer in the New South Wales Parliamentary Library. He has worked and written widely in the fields of constitutional law and political theory. His publications include Socialism and Superior Brains: The Political Thought of Bernard Shaw (London: Routledge, 1993). He is also the co-author (with David Clune) of Decision and Deliberation: The Parliament of New South Wales 1856-2003 (Sydney: Federation Press, 2006).

Peter Johnston is an Honorary Senior Research Fellow in law at the University of Western Australia and a member of the Independent Bar. He taught Constitutional, Administrative and International Law at the University of Western Australia between 1974 and 2003. During that time he appeared in a number of major constitutional and administrative law cases in the Western Australian Supreme Court, Federal Court and High Court. He also held a number of public offices including Chairman, Western Australian Law Reform Commission; Deputy Chair, Environment Protection Authority (WA); Deputy President, Commonwealth Administrative Appeals Tribunal; and Inquiry Commissioner, Commonwealth Human Rights and Equal Opportunity Commission. Since retiring from full-time teaching in 2003 he has continued with research and publication and practice at the bar, interspersed with visiting teaching appointments at Monash University and the University of Western Australia.

HP Lee is the Deputy Dean and Sir John Latham Professor of Law at Monash University. He specialises in constitutional law. His published works include The Australian Judiciary (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2001) (co-author); Constitutional Conflicts in Contemporary Malaysia (Kuala Lumpur: Oxford University Press, 1995); Emergency Powers (Sydney: Law Book Co, 1984); Australian Federal Constitutional Law: Commentary and Materials (Sydney: LBC, 1999) (co-author); and In the Name of National Security: The Legal Dimensions (Sydney: LBC, 1995) (co-author). He is the co-editor of Australian Constitutional Landmarks (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2003); Australian Constitutional Perspectives (Sydney: Law Book Co, 1992); and two books on The Constitution of Malaysia (1978 and 1986). He is currently the Vice-Chairman of the Australian Press Council.

Anne Twomey is a constitutional lawyer who is currently a Visiting Fellow at the University of New South Wales and an Adjunct Senior Lecturer in Law at the University of Sydney. She has worked for the High Court of Australia, the Commonwealth Parliament and The Cabinet Office of New South Wales. Her published works include The Constitution of New South Wales (Sydney: Federation Press, 2004); and The Chameleon Crown: The Queen and Her Australian Governors (Sydney: Federation Press, 2006).

CONTRIBUTORS

John Waugh teaches constitutional law and legal history in the Law School at the University of Melbourne.

Fiona Wheeler is a Reader at the Australian National University College of Law where she is also Director of Research. She researches and publishes in the area of constitutional law, with a particular focus on courts and the judicial system, including separation of powers. With Brian Opeskin, she co-edited The Australian Federal Judicial System (Melbourne: Melbourne University Press, 2000). She is Comments Editor of the Public Law Review, a contributor to the Oxford Companion to the High Court of Australia (2001), and has served on the Executive of the Australian Association of Constitutional Law. From 2000 to 2003 she served as ANU Faculty of Law Sub-Dean.

John Williams is a Professor of Law at the University of Adelaide. His research is in the areas of constitutional law and Australian legal history. He is the author of The Australian Constitution: A Documentary History (Melbourne: Melbourne University Press, 2005); and co-editor of Peace, Order and Good Government: State Constitutional and Parliamentary Reform (Adelaide: Wakefield Press, 2003) and Makers of Miracles: The Cast of the Federation Story (Melbourne: Melbourne University Press, 2000). He co-edited The New Federalist: The Journal of Australian Federation History for its entire (and pre-ordained) life: 1998-2001.

George Winterton is Professor of Constitutional Law at the University of Sydney and an Emeritus Professor of Law at the University of NSW. He is the author of Parliament, the Executive and the Governor-General (Melbourne: Melbourne University Press, 1983); Monarchy to Republic: Australian Republican Government (Melbourne: Oxford University Press, 1986); Judicial Remuneration in Australia (Melbourne: AIJA, 1995); and a co-author of Australian Federal Constitutional Law: Commentary and Materials (Sydney: LBC, 1999). He has edited or co-edited several books, and is the author of many book chapters and articles on constitutional issues. He has been appointed to Constitution-reform bodies by both sides of politics. He has been the General Editor of Constitutional Law and Policy Review since its inception in 1998, and is Vice-President of the Australian Association of Constitutional Law.