Robert Dessaix, winner of the Audio Book of the Year with library borrower, Elsie Simper

Braille and Talking Book Library Awards

The 24th Annual Braille and Talking Book Library Awards were presented on 16 October at the Malthouse Theatre Complex in Southbank as part of the Melbourne Writers' Festival.

The Benalla Award for Audio Book of the Year was presented to Robert Dessaix for Night letters. The award was presented by Mary Dickenson, TDK awards co-ordinator. In accepting the award Robert Dessaix said he was thrilled to be thought worthy of the award and that receiving it was 'an act of grace rather than deserts'. The book was narrated by the author.

The winner of the Tilly Aston Award for Braille Book of the Year was Adib Khan for his book Solitude of illusions. This award was presented by Barbara Blackman, author of the best-selling autobiography Glass after glass.

Elizabeth Newburch, representing the readers' panel who selected this year's winners, presented the Bathurst Award for Narrator of the Year to Bruce Kerr for his reading of The drowner, by Robert Drewe.

A special presentation was made to Jeffrey Hodgson who recently narrated his 100th book. Shirley Lamb, who presented the award, echoed the sentiments of all library borrowers when she paid tribute to narrators for the hours of pleasure that their talents provide.

A special feature of the Braille and Talking Book Library Awards is the Readers' Panel who select a winner for each award from the short-listed titles. This year seventy-five borrowers were involved in the selection process. The host for the awards function was councillor Adam Held, mayor of the City of Stonnington. ■
