Recent movements in the library and information sector

Charles Sturt University

Ken Dillon has been appointed as the head of Australia's largest LIS school, the School of Information Studies at Charles Sturt University. Ken is a senior lecturer in teacher librarianship. His professional interests include collection management, applications of IT in schools, and the information needs and professional development of teachers and teacher-librarians.

Gayner Eyre has been appointed for another term as director of the Centre for Information Studies, Charles Sturt University, following Ken Dillon's promotion to become head of school, School of Information Studies, and his resignation from the Centre directorship. Stuart Ferguson returns to the CIS management team as associate director.

LISWA

Claire Forte has been appinted as acting state librarian. More information will follow. Susan Feeney was appointed to the position of director: public library services at LISWA. Susan began her working career in libraries in the early 1970s, and has worked in a range of libraries on the east coast. Susan also had a two-year appointment as director, Library and Information Centre of Statistics Canada in Ottawa. While she was in Canada she was the recipient of the Agatha Bystram Award in Leadership in Information Management awarded by the Canadian Council of Federal Libraries. She also received the Canadian Library Association Award in recognition of exceptional contributions to the dissemination of government information to Canadian libraries. ∎

Last month I reported on the appointment of Michelle Baird. As Michelle will be working on a wide range of initiatives, we thought it beneficial to highlight some of the many areas in which she will be providing help and support.

Michelle's responsibilities are in the area of information and communication technologies (ICT) and associated legislation and reviews. This includes, but is not limited to:

- the Privacy Act;
- public access to information the internet and the role of libraries and information services;
- online infrastructure — cost, reliability, speed;
- the Digital Agenda Bill and copyright review;
- the Broadcasting Services Act and the online content review; and
- world trade negotiations in services.

Michelle will also be providing secretariat services to the Copyright and IP committees. She will be very busy indeed!

To contact Michelle, phone 02 6285 1877, fx 02 6282 2249, or e-mail michelle.baird@alia.org.au.
