13E Preventative detention orders

- (1) The Supreme Court may, on an application under section 13C, make a preventative detention order in relation to a person if—
- (a) satisfied on reasonable grounds that—
- (i) the person—
- (A) will engage in a terrorist act; or
- (B) possesses or has under his or her control (whether solely or jointly with any other person) a thing that is connected with the preparation for, or the engagement of a person in, a terrorist act; or

- (C) has done an act in preparation for, or planning, a terrorist act; and
 - (ii) making the order would substantially assist in preventing a terrorist act occurring; and
 - (iii) detaining the person for the period for which he or she is to be detained under the order is reasonably necessary for the purpose referred to in subparagraph (ii); or
- (b) satisfied on reasonable grounds that—
- (i) a terrorist act has occurred within the last 28 days; and
 - (ii) it is necessary to detain the person to preserve evidence of, or relating to, the terrorist act; and
 - (iii) detaining the person for the period for which he or she is to be detained under the order is reasonably necessary for the purpose referred to in subparagraph (ii).
- (1A) In making an order under this section, the Supreme Court must have regard to any submissions made by the Public Interest Monitor. S. 13E(1A) inserted by No. 72/2011 s. 48(1).
- (2) A terrorist act referred to in subsection (1)(a) must be one—
- (a) that is imminent; and
 - (b) that is expected to occur, in any event, at some time in the next 14 days.
- (3) The Supreme Court may refuse to make a preventative detention order unless the authorised police officer applying for it gives the Court any further information that it requests concerning the grounds on which the order is sought. S. 13E(3) amended by No. 37/2014 s. 10(Sch. item 167.7).

- (4) If the application to the Supreme Court is made without notice of it being given to the person in relation to whom a preventative detention order is being sought, the Supreme Court may, if in its opinion it is desirable to do so, make an interim preventative detention order pending the hearing and final determination of the application.

Note

The maximum period during which a person may be detained under an interim order is 48 hours or until the final determination of the application, whichever is the later: see subsection (6) and section 13G(2).

- (5) If the Supreme Court makes an interim preventative detention order, it must—
- (a) specify a day on which, and time at which, the hearing of the application is to be resumed; and
 - (b) direct the applicant to cause notice of the resumed hearing to be given to—
 - (i) the person in relation to whom the interim order is made; and
 - (ii) if the applicant is aware of the identity of a lawyer who acts for that person in relation to any matter, that lawyer.

- (7) On finally determining an application following the making of an interim preventative detention order, the Supreme Court may by order—
- (a) confirm the order without variation or vary the period specified in the order as the period during which the person in relation to whom it is made may be detained under it or vary the order to include, or omit, a provision of a kind referred to in section 13F(6); or
- Note
- The period of detention in the confirmed order may be extended, or further extended, under section 13I.
- (b) revoke the order if not satisfied as mentioned in subsection (1).
- (8) If the person in relation to whom the interim preventative detention order is made is being detained in a prison or youth justice facility, the applicant for that order must cause a copy of any order made under subsection (7) to be given to the Secretary to the Department of Justice or the Secretary to the Department of Human Services (as the case requires) as soon as practicable after it is made.
- (9) On the hearing by the Supreme Court of an application under section 13C (including a resumed hearing referred to in subsection (5))—
- (a) the person in relation to whom a preventative detention order is being sought (including a person in relation to whom an interim preventative detention order is in force) is entitled to appear and give evidence, call witnesses, examine and cross-examine witnesses, adduce material and make submissions; but

S. 13E(8)
amended by
No. 48/2006
s. 42(Sch.
item 35.2).

- (b) the absence of that person does not prevent the Supreme Court from determining, or finally determining, the application.
- (10) If the person who is the subject of an application to the Supreme Court under section 13C is not legally represented on the hearing of the application (including a resumed hearing referred to in subsection (5)), the Supreme Court may order Victoria Legal Aid to provide legal representation for that person on that hearing if satisfied that it is in the interests of justice to do so having regard to the financial circumstances of that person or any other circumstances.
- (11) Despite anything in the Legal Aid Act 1978, Victoria Legal Aid must provide legal representation in accordance with an order under subsection (10).

Note

The order may continue to have effect after the 48 hours: see section 13E(6).

13H When order starts and ceases to have effect

- (a) if the preventative detention order so provides, on an order for the person's detention made under a corresponding preventative detention law ceasing to have effect; or
- (b) in any other case, when it is made.

Note

When the order starts to have effect it authorises the person to be taken into custody, if necessary (see section 13F(1)(a)). The period for which the person may be detained under the order only starts to run when the person is first taken into custody or detained under the order (see section 13F(1)(b)).

- (2) A preventative detention order in relation to a person under which the person is required to be taken into custody ceases to have effect at the end of the period of 48 hours after the order is made if the person has not been taken into custody under the order within that period.
- (3) If a preventative detention order does not cease to have effect under subsection (2), it ceases to have effect when whichever of the following first occurs—
- (a) the end of—
- (i) the period specified in the order as the period during which the person may be detained under the order; or

(3) Without limiting subsection (2), the police officer may, under section 13V, release, or arrange in writing for the release of, the person from detention under the preventative detention order so that the person may be dealt with in accordance with the warrant.

S. 13U(3)

(4) To avoid doubt, the fact that the person is released from detention under the preventative detention order so that the person may be—

Note

During this period, the provisions of this Part that apply to a person who is being detained under a preventative detention order (for example, section 13ZC which deals with the people the person may contact) do not apply to the person.

(6) To avoid doubt—

- (a) the release of the person under subsection (1) from detention under the preventative detention order does not extend the period for which the preventative detention order remains in force in relation to the person; and

Note

This means that the time for which the person may be detained under the order continues to run while the person is released.

- (b) a person released under subsection (1) from detention under a preventative detention order may again be taken into custody and detained under the order at any time while the order remains in force in relation to the person.
