13E Preventative detention orders

- (1) The Supreme Court may, on an application under section 13C, make a preventative detention order in relation to a person if—
  - (a) satisfied on reasonable grounds that—
    - (i) the person—
      - (A) will engage in a terrorist act; or
      - (B) possesses or has under his or her control (whether solely or jointly with any other person) a thing that is connected with the preparation for, or the engagement of a person in, a terrorist act; or
      - (C) has done an act in preparation for, or planning, a terrorist act; and
    - (ii) making the order would substantially assist in preventing a terrorist act occurring; and
    - (iii) detaining the person for the period for which he or she is to be detained under the order is reasonably necessary for the purpose referred to in subparagraph (ii); or
  - (b) satisfied on reasonable grounds that—
    - (i) a terrorist act has occurred within the last 28 days; and
    - (ii) it is necessary to detain the person to preserve evidence of, or relating to, the terrorist act; and
    - (iii) detaining the person for the period for which he or she is to be detained under the order is reasonably necessary for the purpose referred to in subparagraph (ii).

- (2) A terrorist act referred to in subsection (1)(a) must be one—
- (a) that is imminent; and
  - (b) that is expected to occur, in any event, at some time in the next 14 days.
- (3) The Supreme Court may refuse to make a preventative detention order unless the authorised member of the force applying for it gives the Court any further information that it requests concerning the grounds on which the order is sought.
- (4) If the application to the Supreme Court is made without notice of it being given to the person in relation to whom a preventative detention order is being sought, the Supreme Court may, if in its opinion it is desirable to do so, make an interim preventative detention order pending the hearing and final determination of the application.

Note

The maximum period during which a person may be detained under an interim order is 48 hours or until the final determination of the application, whichever is the later: see subsection (6) and section 13G(2).

- (5) If the Supreme Court makes an interim preventative detention order, it must—
- (a) specify a day on which, and time at which, the hearing of the application is to be resumed; and
  - (b) direct the applicant to cause notice of the resumed hearing to be given to—
    - (i) the person in relation to whom the interim order is made; and
    - (ii) if the applicant is aware of the identity of a lawyer who acts for that person in relation to any matter, that lawyer.

s. 13E

- (6) An interim preventative detention order that, but for this subsection, would cease to have effect before the application is finally determined, continues to have effect, subject to section 13G(1), until the application is finally determined.
- (7) On finally determining an application following the making of an interim preventative detention order, the Supreme Court may by order—
- (a) confirm the order without variation or vary the period specified in the order as the period during which the person in relation to whom it is made may be detained under it or vary the order to include, or omit, a provision of a kind referred to in section 13F(6); or

Note

The period of detention in the confirmed order may be extended, or further extended, under section 13I.

- (b) revoke the order if not satisfied as mentioned in subsection (1).
- (8) If the person in relation to whom the interim preventative detention order is made is being detained in a prison or youth justice facility, the applicant for that order must cause a copy of any order made under subsection (7) to be given to the Secretary to the Department of Justice or the Secretary to the Department of Human Services (as the case requires) as soon as practicable after it is made.
- (9) On the hearing by the Supreme Court of an application under section 13C (including a resumed hearing referred to in subsection (5))—
- (a) the person in relation to whom a preventative detention order is being sought (including a person in relation to whom an interim preventative detention order is in force) is entitled to appear and give evidence, call

- witnesses, examine and cross-examine witnesses, adduce material and make submissions; but
- (b) the absence of that person does not prevent the Supreme Court from determining, or finally determining, the application.
- (10) If the person who is the subject of an application to the Supreme Court under section 13C is not legally represented on the hearing of the application (including a resumed hearing referred to in subsection (5)), the Supreme Court may order Victoria Legal Aid to provide legal representation for that person on that hearing if satisfied that it is in the interests of justice to do so having regard to the financial circumstances of that person or any other circumstances.
- (11) Despite anything in the Legal Aid Act 1978, Victoria Legal Aid must provide legal representation in accordance with an order under subsection (10).

13F Nature of preventative detention order

- (1) A preventative detention order is an order that the person in relation to whom it is made may be—
- (a) taken into custody (unless he or she is already being detained under a preventative detention order, or an order for his or her detention made under a corresponding preventative detention law, that is in force or was in force immediately before the making of the new order); and

- (2) The order must be in writing.
- (3) Subject to section 13G, the period of time specified in the order under subsection (1)(b)(ii) must not exceed 14 days.

  - (b) the period during which the person may be detained under the order; and
  - (c) the place or places where the person may be, or must not be, detained under the order or, if the person is under 18 years of age, the place or class of place where the person must be detained under the order; and

Note

See subsection (8) for rules as to where a person under 18 years of age may be detained.

- (d) the date on which, and the time at which, the order is made; and
  - (e) whether the person is allowed to have any further contact with a person under section 13ZD(4) and, if so—
    - (i) the person or persons with whom he or she may have contact;

- (ii) the period for which he or she may have contact on any day and the number of days on which he or she may have such contact;
  - (iii) any other conditions applicable to the contact; and
- (f) if applicable, particulars of the order for the person's detention made under a corresponding preventative detention law on the ceasing to have effect of which the order is to start to have effect; and

Note

See section 13H(1).

- (g) if applicable, the date and time after which the person may not be taken into custody under the order; and

Note

See section 13H(2).

- (h) a summary of the grounds on which the order is made.
- (5) To avoid doubt, subsection (4)(h) does not require information to be included in the summary if the disclosure of the information is likely to prejudice national security (within the meaning of the National Security Information (Criminal and Civil Proceedings) Act 2004 of the Commonwealth).
- (6) A preventative detention order may contain a provision directing that the contact that the person in relation to whom it is made has with a lawyer under section 13ZF must not be monitored in accordance with section 13ZG if the Supreme Court is satisfied that it is appropriate to give such a direction.

13G Duration of preventative detention orders

- (1) Subject to subsection (2), the maximum period (including that period, as extended, or further extended, under section 13I) that may be specified in a preventative detention order made by the Supreme Court as the period during which a person may be detained under the order is 14 days less any period during which the person is actually detained under an order for the person's detention made under a corresponding preventative detention law on the same basis.
- (2) The maximum period that may be specified in an interim preventative detention order made by the Supreme Court as the period during which a person may be detained under the order is 48 hours.

Note

The order may continue to have effect after the 48 hours: see section 13E(6).

- (3) To avoid doubt, for the purposes of subsection (1) orders are made on the same basis if—
  - (a) in the case of orders made on the basis of preventing a terrorist act from occurring, they relate to the same terrorist act occurring within the same period; and
  - (b) in the case of orders made on the basis of preserving evidence of, or relating to, a terrorist act, they relate to the same terrorist act.

- (1) A preventative detention order in relation to a person starts to have effect—
- (a) if the preventative detention order so provides, on an order for the person's detention made under a corresponding preventative detention law ceasing to have effect; or
  - (b) in any other case, when it is made.

Note

When the order starts to have effect it authorises the person to be taken into custody, if necessary (see section 13F(1)(a)). The period for which the person may be detained under the order only starts to run when the person is first taken into custody or detained under the order (see section 13F(1)(b)).

- (2) A preventative detention order in relation to a person under which the person is required to be taken into custody ceases to have effect at the end of the period of 48 hours after the order is made if the person has not been taken into custody under the order within that period.
- (3) If a preventative detention order does not cease to have effect under subsection (2), it ceases to have effect when whichever of the following first occurs—
- (a) the end of—
    - (i) the period specified in the order as the period during which the person may be detained under the order; or
    - (ii) if that period is extended or further extended under section 13I—that period as extended or further extended;

- (b) the revocation of the order under section 13E, 13N or 13O.

13I Extension of preventative detention order

- (1) If—

- (a) a preventative detention order is made by the Supreme Court in relation to a person on the final determination of an application under section 13C; and
- (b) the order is in force in relation to the person—

an authorised member of the force may apply to the Supreme Court for an extension, or a further extension, of the period for which the order is to be in force in relation to the person.

- (2) The application must—

- (a) be made in writing; and
- (b) set out the facts and other grounds on which the applicant considers that the extension, or further extension, is reasonably necessary for the purpose for which the order was made; and

Note

See section 13E(1) for the purpose for which a preventative detention order may be made.

- (c) set out the outcomes and particulars of all previous applications for extensions, or further extensions, of the order.

- (3) The information in the application must be sworn by the applicant.

Note

The information may be affirmed instead of sworn—see the definition of sworn in section 38 of the Interpretation of Legislation Act 1984.

- (4) The applicant must cause notice of the application to be given to the person in relation to whom the preventative detention order is in force.
- (5) The person in relation to whom the preventative detention order is in force is entitled to appear on the hearing and give evidence, call witnesses, examine and cross-examine witnesses, adduce material and make submissions. However, his or her absence does not prevent the Supreme Court from determining the application.
- (6) The Supreme Court may, by order, extend, or further extend, the period for which the order is to be in force in relation to the person if it is satisfied that detaining the person under the order for the period as extended, or further extended, is reasonably necessary for the purpose for which the order was made.
- (7) The extension, or further extension, must not result in the preventative detention order specifying a period in excess of the maximum period permissible under section 13G(1).
- (8) If the person in relation to whom the order is in force is being detained in a prison or youth justice facility and the Supreme Court makes an order under subsection (6) that extends, or further extends, the period for which the order is to be in force, the applicant must cause a copy of the order under that subsection to be given to the Secretary to the Department of Justice or the Secretary to the Department of Human Services (as the case requires) as soon as practicable after it is made.

13V Release of person from preventative detention

- (1) The member of the force who is detaining a person under a preventative detention order may release the person from detention under the order or arrange in writing for his or her release from detention under the order.

Note

A person may be released, for example, so that the person may be arrested and otherwise dealt with under Subdivision (30A) of Division 1 of Part III of the Crimes Act 1958.

- (2) The member of the force who releases, or arranges in writing for the release of, a person from detention under a preventative detention order must give the person a written statement that the person is being released from that detention. The statement must be signed by the member.
- (3) Subsection (2) does not apply if the member of the force releases, or arranges in writing for the release of, the person from detention so that the person may be dealt with—
  - (a) under Subdivision (30A) of Division 1 of Part III of the Crimes Act 1958; or
  - (b) in accordance with a warrant under section 34D of the Australian Security Intelligence Organisation Act 1979 of the Commonwealth; or
  - (c) under the provisions of Division 4 of Part IAA, or Part IC, of the Crimes Act 1914 of the Commonwealth.
- (4) To avoid doubt, a person may be taken to have been released from detention under a preventative detention order even if—
  - (a) the person is informed that he or she is being released from detention under the order; and

- (b) the person is taken into custody on some other basis immediately after the person is informed that he or she is being released from detention under the order.
- (5) To avoid doubt, a person is taken not to be detained under a preventative detention order during a period during which the person is released from detention under the order.

Note

During this period, the provisions of this Part that apply to a person who is being detained under a preventative detention order (for example, section 13ZC which deals with the people the person may contact) do not apply to the person.

- (6) To avoid doubt—
- (a) the release of the person under subsection (1) from detention under the preventative detention order does not extend the period for which the preventative detention order remains in force in relation to the person; and

Note

This means that the time for which the person may be detained under the order continues to run while the person is released.

- (b) a person released under subsection (1) from detention under a preventative detention order may again be taken into custody and detained under the order at any time while the order remains in force in relation to the person.

- (4) If requested to do so under subsection (1), the Secretary to the Department of Justice may, by instrument, authorise the transfer to a prison of a person being detained under a preventative detention order from a police gaol or other place where he or she is being detained.
